FROM THE REGIONAL MANAGER’S DESK

Hello Africa!

It’s good to be back in a little relaxed mood. My first issue of Africa Section Newsletter which I did in December was done with great anxiety. At that time, I was still Interim Regional Manager and I thought to myself, what you were thinking. I had to learn and learn fast. This is the time I understood the meaning of “an invisible college”. This is one of the terms one thought it was there just to complete the curriculum. Ask me, its real, it exist. Without the invisible college, I might not have made it to this second newsletter.

For Africa to keep its centre place in this highway, your membership in very important to sustain our role in the global LIS arena.

Let me take this opportunity to call all African library and information community to join IFLA and keep our place in the global LIS arena.

Congratulatory Message!

Africa wishes to congratulate Helena Asamoah-Hassan for being elected 2007 – 2009 to IFLA Governing Board. We pledge our full support to her.

Helena R Asamoah-Hassan

President – Elect, the diary

I have had the opportunity to start of my new role as IFLA President-elect with an exciting and interesting schedule since August 2007. First up were the business meetings of the IFLA Governing Board and various committees held in The Hague, Netherlands during December 2007. In late January I travelled to Canada to give a speech at the Closing Luncheon Gala at the Ontario Library Association Super Conference in Toronto. The theme of the conference was Reinvention, Regeneration and Rejuvenation.

From Toronto I travelled to Washington DC where I was hosted by the Library of Congress for a week-long programme.

The first day in Washington was spent at the Library of Congress. The day was concluded with a dinner meeting with the DC Chapter of the Special Libraries Association, International Relations Round Table.

From Toronto I travelled to Washington DC where I was hosted by the Library of Congress for a week-long programme.

The day was concluded with a dinner meeting with the DC Chapter of the Special Libraries Association, International Relations Round Table.

The second day was spent with senior staff at the Special Library Association (SLA) Headquarters in Alexandria, Virginia followed by lunch with area library association leaders at the American Library Association. To end the day, I participated at a Colloquium at the American Catholic University, School of Library and Information
On the third day, I visited several special and university libraries in Washington DC, namely George Washington University - Gelman Library, the International Monetary Fund, World Bank, National Geographic Society and Howard University Libraries.

The forth day, my last day in Washington, I visited the Columbia (DC) Public Library. On my way to the airport for departure to Dublin, Ohio for the OCLC Members Council meeting, I visited the US Geologic Survey Institute Library.

In the April month, I attended an International Conference on Advocacy and Marketing for Libraries where I delivered a keynote address on role of IFLA in advocating for libraries. The Finnish conference was held at the Parliament House of Finland in Helsinki. I also participated on a study tour of Finish Library Association in Helsinki and the IFLA Second Governing Board Meeting at The Hague.

Other places visited during April were:

- Sello Library, Espoo City
- the Finnish Library Association – discussion held with the Secretary General, Ms Sinikka Sipila
- Rikhardinkatu Library
- Parliament House
- 10 libraries in Helsinki City Library
- Helsinki University Undergraduate Library and Learning Centre Alexandria
- Hakunila District Library and Keski-Espoo Library

In May I had to pack my bags again to go north again. This time to deliver a keynote address at the Swedish Library Association in Lulea, situated in the north of Sweden. As indicated, my activities and experiences to date have been exciting, interesting and diverse. It gave me exposure to other parts of the world and confirmed again the powerful role that libraries can play in society and the commitment of librarians to respond positively to the changing needs of their users and all the new developments in our profession.

All these visits were inspiring and I’m looking forward with great anticipation to learn and work with IFLA members, IFLA friends and IFLA partners during my term of office.

REGIONAL OFFICE NEWS

Regional Office Launch

After winning the bid in 2007, the University of South Africa held a grand opening of the Regional Office on the 15th of February in Pretoria, South Africa.

The ceremony was well attended by leaders in the profession and UNISA Management. IFLA HQ was presented by Sjoerd Koopman and ALP, by Birgitta Sandell. In the audience, were also Africa Section Standing Committee Members and the convener of IFLA Women, Information and Libraries Discussion Group, Ms Thabiseng Kotsokoane. To read all about it, watch out for a special edition on the launch after the June issue.

Visit to Dakar, Senegal

After a hectic schedule of the launch of the Regional Office, and mid term meeting, I managed to take time off for an orientation in Dakar, Senegal. I had an opportunity to have a week’s orientation from Henre Sene, former Regional Manager for Africa for the past 22 years. It was a great honor to be mentored by this laid back, calm gentleman. The French Language Centre Manager and University Librarian, Mme Marietou Diop was the main host for my visit under the auspices of Cheik Anta Diop University Library.

The visit in a way was a gesture of Henre Sene to officially handover the Regional Office.

I had an opportunity also work with Marietou Diop for a way for both of us, this was first experience to be IFLA Regional Officers. We managed to compose a workplan for 2008 with emphasis with co ordination of activities. The plan did not fall short to include the Arabic Language Centre in Africa.

During my orientation, I managed to visit the National Association Senegaolise Des Bibliothecaires, Archivist et Documentalistes, ASBAD, Executive Committee, led by their President, Dr. Adama Pam.

Next on my list was meeting with the School of Librarians, Archivist and Documentaliste, EBAD, Interesting to note was that, the newly designed distance learning curriculum in French. The programme is in its second year. They are working at standardizing the curriculum for all Francophone Africa.

I also took a turn at the National Archives and National Library. The National Archives is faced with a great challenge of disintegrating materials. Unfortunately they do not have access to funding.

In South Africa, as part of the National Library we have a Centre of a Book. In Dakar they also have a similar structure, they have a book and reading centre Ministère de la Culture et du Patrimoine Historique Classé: Direction du Livre et de la Lecture. Their vision is to lobby politician.

Last on my agenda, I had an honor to meet with Cheik Anta Diop University Rector/Principal, Prof. Abdou Salam SALI. I was humbled by the gesturer of the Rector offering his undivided support to the University Library and the African library community.

In conclusion, I would like to thank the French Language Centre Manager, Marietou Diop and her University staff for hosting me and putting the programme in place. To Henre Sene, thank you for his availability and for sharing his experience with me. To all the Senegalese, colleagues, merci beaucoup for your patience with me especially, my language challenges.
Letters of the President

The Letter of the President “LOP” is distributed at least once a month by email providing an overview of some of the current activities of the IFLA President, President – Elect, the Governing Board and Headquarters. It contains LINKS for further consultation and will be sent to IFLA-L and all other mailing lists organised by IFLA. Concise (one page), with no illustrations or special layout, it should cause no reception problems.

Letter 2008, No. 4 by Claudia Lux, IFLA President

Dear IFLA Members

April is the month of rain, snow and sun on the same day. At least in Germany, this month is unpredictable. However, your IFLA president was steady and predictable, as she made fewer journeys.

When I was still in Ramallah, Peter Lor went to a UNESCO meeting in Paris and managed to successfully put the IFLA Multicultural Library Manifesto http://www.ifla.org/VII/s32/index.htm into the next level of UNESCO’S acceptance process. The new Digital Library Manifesto was also presented and made known to the colleagues and decision groups at UNESCO.

On April 7th I went to The Hague to meet with SIDA representatives at IFLA Headquarters. SIDA is a great Sponsor for IFLA/ALP– Action for Development through Libraries Programme see: http://www.ifla.org/VI/1/alp.htm . Together with Peter Lor, Stuart Hamilton, Birgitta Sandell from IFLA/ALP and Gunnar Sahlin, IFLA treasurer, I talked with SIDA about their future activities. We discussed the evaluation report and learned about the programme changes at SIDA. IFLA wants to continue to work with SIDA, but its changes of focus will affect the way in which we can fulfil our partnership. For this reason, we need more support for IFLA/ALP throughout the world.

From April 19 to 25, I was in The Hague again. The ‘GB-week’, as we call the week when the Governing Board and all its Committees meet, was a wonderful exchange of ideas and activities. In one week, different committees met to develop new decisions for the Governing Board. We discussed in length all aspects of IFLA’s advocacy policy. It was a good meeting with a broad discussion on advocacy, a key factor for library development and sustainability. New ideas to strengthen our World Library and Information Congress (WLIC) were developed by a sub-group and discussed with the GB. The Professional Committee came forward with its suggestions for the new rules of procedure. Everybody was happy to learn that the members supported the new statutes by sending in their approvals. On Monday, April 21 Ellen Tise, Jennefer Nicholson and I went to Amsterdam to meet with CLM colleagues. We had a very nice trip, not only because of the magnificent fields of tulips in a mosaic of bright colours we saw from the train, but also at the meeting.

I am not attaching photos, as I promised to make this newsletter easily accessible, but you will find many wonderful photos of tulip fields by using your search engine.

With best wishes to all of you

New Secretary General of IFLA

Jennefer Nicholson

Source: http://www.ifla.org/V/press/IFLAsg08.htm

IFLA is pleased to announce the appointment of Jennefer Nicholson as its new Secretary General, from September 2008. She will join IFLA’s Headquarters in The Hague on 1 June 2008 as Secretary General designate and work with the outgoing Secretary General, Prof Peter Lor, until she takes over on 6 September 2008.

Announcing the appointment, IFLA President Prof Claudia Lux said that the Governing Board is delighted to be able to appoint as IFLA’s Chief Executive Officer a professional colleague of Jennefer’s stature. Given the dynamic environment in which IFLA operates and the Federation’s ambitious plans, Jennefer’s extensive skills... and experience will be a great asset to IFLA in the coming years.

Jennefer commented: "My appointment as Secretary General is a great honour for me, and an opportunity to give back to IFLA, having gained great professional and personal value as a member over the last ten years. I welcome the responsibility and in doing so acknowledge the contribution of all those members who have had the vision to lead IFLA to the position it now holds in the international arena.

I have a strong commitment to the values and professional concerns shared locally and globally by those in the library sector, and extensive experience in the sector and association management. I look forward to working with the President Claudia Lux, President-elect Ellen Tise, the Governing Board, members and staff to successfully articulate and achieve IFLA’s strategic goals, and to strengthen the organization. I also look forward to meeting those of you I don’t yet know."

LIBRARIANS CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE IN THE COPYRIGHT ARENA

On behalf of eIFL-IP, I recently sent out a questionnaire on the LIASA listserv, asking for information from librarians to assist Dr. Kenneth Crews of Columbia University in the USA in his study on copyright limitations and exceptions for libraries. This study was commissioned by the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) and is very important for libraries. Over a period of more than a month, only a handful of librarians responded to the questionnaire. This concerned me, as librarians complain a lot about copyright and how it hinders access to information and restricts them in library projects. One librarian responded to the questionnaire by saying that “Librarians do not have any say in matters the politicians rule”. Another suggested that perhaps librarians do not know what limitations and exceptions are. A third person seemed concerned that her institution might be implicated if she provided examples.

I thought I should write this brief article to say that “Librarians can make a difference”. I want to put everyone at ease and let them know that no one will be implicated for providing responses to the questionnaire. The very fact that a librarian is worried about being implicated indicates that the laws may be too restrictive, or they may be hampering rather than assisting her in carrying out her professional duties. Librarians are generally diligent about copyright compliance, so where librarians may be ‘transgressing’ the copyright law, it may very well be that the laws are too restrictive in certain circumstances, and not because they want to infringe copyright. Examples of such ‘transgressions’ may very well provide the basis for a new and necessary copyright exception for the future.

The purpose of the WIPO study is to help libraries get better copyright laws in the future to carry out their important functions. WIPO is the global body that makes things happen in intellectual property, so the fact that they are looking at limitations and exceptions for libraries is a very positive step indeed. For the benefit of those who are human rights information. The Malawi Human Rights Commission Library has been working on several areas to respond to the changing human rights information needs of their library user so that they have the right to access information in various thematic areas and formats.

I had an opportunity to interact with globally outstanding Information Specialists like IFLA President Hon. C. Lux, Mr. Stuart Hamilton - IFLA Senior Policy Advisor, Frode Bakken from Norway, Prof. Paul Sturges Current Chair for IFLA (FAIFE), Ms Anne Hustad- Norwegian Library Association Chairperson, and Hani Jaber- Palestine Library Association Chairperson.

I am very grateful to IFLA for its effort to assist me to develop professionally.

The purpose of the WIPO study is to help libraries get better copyright laws in the future to carry out their important functions. WIPO is the global body that makes things happen in intellectual property, so the fact that they are looking at limitations and exceptions for libraries is a very positive step indeed. For the benefit of those who are not sure what copyright limitations and exceptions are, here is a basic definition from Wikipedia - http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Limitations_and_exceptions_to_copyright

The Commonwealth of Learning (www.col.org) also has a very useful document providing guidelines on limitations and exceptions at -

On a personal/institutional level, I felt it important to take up issues with Higher Education of South Africa (HESA) and various Government Departments to highlight library and educational concerns, e.g. issues about copyright and the sensory-disabled; issues about access to knowledge in the WIPO Broadcasting Treaty (which WIPO has now ‘put to rest’ fortunately) and the US Free Trade Agreement with the Southern African Customs Union (SACU) which had a very restrictive IP Chapter (fortunately SACU decided not to sign the Free Trade Agreement). I also took up the Free Trade Agreement matter with the International Global Dialogue, the UK Department for International Development (DFID) and USAID to ensure that the IP Chapter was not adopted.

On a global level, librarians are very active in copyright issues. Since IFLA and eIFL librarians have been attending WIPO, they have brought issues affecting libraries to the attention of politicians around the world. By invitation from IFLA, I was privileged to be the first librarian from a developing country to attend the WIPO General Assembly in Geneva in 2006 and to present a Joint Statement on behalf of IFLA and eIFL on “Libraries and the Development Agenda”. I was invited to a number of ‘key’ meetings and also took the opportunity of discussing copyright issues on an informal basis with high-ranking officials from different African countries, including members of the South African delegation. IFLA and eIFL are well-respected internationally and their input is really valued at WIPO meetings. Librarians are making a difference!

Working with EBLIDA and many civil societies, IFLA and eIFL have succeeded in getting WIPO to do the study on copyright exceptions especially for libraries – something that has never been addressed in the past. That is why this study is so important. What the researcher, Dr. Kenneth Crews, hopes to receive from librarians around the world are concrete examples where libraries need limitations and exceptions to enable them to carry out their very important functions.

Currently the South African Copyright Act does not address the needs of libraries, particularly in the digital environment, or the needs of their users (researchers, teachers, students, sensory-disabled, etc.) and examples from librarians will help him to incorporate these needs into his Recommendations to WIPO during 2008.

Should you have any queries or need more information about the WIPO study on limitations and exceptions, please contact me at Denise.Nicholson@wits.ac.za.

IFLA FAIFE US Workshop: Internet Manifesto and Libraries and HIV/AIDS

(Picture by Marcia Rosetto) The Federation of Librarians with the director of Hartford Public Library.

FAIFE is a Standing Committee of IFLA with its focus on promoting the basic human right of access to information and was established in 1998.

FAIFE has been hosting several workshops in different locations. The US workshop focused on two issues, namely, the IFLA FAIFE Internet Manifesto and the role of libraries in public health issues, such as HIV/AIDS

As one of ten attendees from all over the world; from Uganda, Nigeria, Zimbabwe, Brazil, Mexico, Philippines, Rica and Thailand, and presenters from the US and Britain, we formed in those few short days a truly International Federation of Librarians. We met with courageous, inspiring and award winning librarians, and visited awe-inspiring Libraries. Our host was Barbara Jones, University Librarian and IFLA FAIFE Secretary

In New York we were hosted by Loida Garcia from the Queens Public Library, IFLA FAIFE member. We were joined by chair of the IFLA FAIFE committee, Paul Sturges.

To encourage the open and free flow of information the following procedures were observed in other libraries viz.

- Yale University, no logs are kept on user terminals of access or login-in information. The computer is reset when a student logs out. Yale also has a very progressive public access policy. The public is not only allowed access to the collections, but also to public access computers. And again no logs of access are recorded and the computer will automatically reset after a period of inactivity.
- Yale University Libraries, along with Wesleyan University libraries, and all the other libraries we visited, no longer records the user circulation information. As soon as a user returns an item, the link between the user and the item that was borrowed, is severed. The privacy rights of users are protected, since libraries cannot be forced to surrender the information accessed by their users.
- The Queens Library Health Link program in partnership with the Queens Health Network and the American Cancer Society runs a mobile mammography unit at 32 of the 62 libraries in the Queens Library network. The service is offered at no cost to those who do not have health insurance. While those with insurance are not turned away, the goal of the programme is to increase access to cancer screening and care among medically underserved communities.

- The Flushing Public Library, one of the libraries in the Queens Library Network, has a health literacy programme. As the name suggests it combines English language literacy with health education. It is intended for new immigrants and those who do not speak English.
- Queens Central Library offers an HIV/AIDS awareness programme as part of their Educating Seniors programme.

These examples led me to believe that there is nothing that can stand in the way of an active librarian who is truly interested in serving the needs of the community. There is a role for information, and therefore librarians and libraries, in all of the challenges that we are facing in building a strong South Africa. All we need is the willingness to engage.

To me the Statue of Liberty- the French people’s gift to the people of America- a woman, with a light in one hand and a book in the other, is a perfect symbol and salute to the work of the IFLA FAIFE Standing Committee.

The Internet Manifesto was created by IFLA FAIFE and approved by IFLA in 2002. The Manifesto guidelines are available at www.ifla.org/faife/policy/iflastat/Internet-ManifestoGuidelines.pdf. The key principle is access to information for all regardless of age, race or any other differences. The Internet is considered a key tool to not only freedom of access, but also freedom of information, in particular remote rural places, but also as a medium for free expression. It brings the rights enshrined in article 19 of the UN Universal Declaration of Human Rights, closer to practice.

At age 19, Yohannes Gebregeorgis borrowed a soft-cover romance novel entitled "Love Kitten" that changed his life forever.

"I just wanted to come back to Ethiopia and help children have a future, have hope," Yohannes Gebregeorgis says.

Born in rural Ethiopia to an illiterate cattle merchant who insisted upon his son's education, Gebregeorgis had seen a few books in school. But it was the experience of having a book of his own that sparked a lifelong commitment.

Today, at 56, Gebregeorgis is establishing libraries and literacy programs to connect Ethiopian children with books.

"Most Ethiopian children have only access to textbooks in the classroom," says Gebregeorgis. "Books children read outside of school, those are the spices of education."

It wasn't until he became a children's librarian in the United States that he realized what the children of his native home were missing.

Forced to flee Ethiopia to the United States as a political refugee in 1981, Gebregeorgis ultimately put himself through university, obtaining a graduate degree in library science. He relocated to the Bay Area, taking a post at the San Francisco Children's Library in 1985.

There, he met "The Little Engine That Could," "Captain Ahab" and "Peter Pan." He realized the impact children's books could make on a child's sense of wonder and vision.

“Children could imagine everything from books -- connections to other cultures, to other people, to other children, and to the universe at large,” recalls Gebregeorgis. “It gives them hope. It gives them pleasure. It gives them everything that they cannot otherwise get in regular textbooks.”

But Gebregeorgis found that, among the brilliantly illustrated books in 70 languages, there were none in Amharic, the primary language of Ethiopia, and none representing the places and characters of Ethiopian lore.

When the library allocated $1,200 for the purchase of Ethiopian books the following year, Gebregeorgis was unable to find any, because of prohibitive publishing, purchasing and importing costs in his home country.

So he wrote one. “Silly Mammo” was the first bilingual Amharic-English children's book, and it led Gebregeorgis to establish Ethiopia Reads in 1988. Using proceeds from book sales and grassroots book-a-thons, the nonprofit financed his efforts to bring children's libraries to Ethiopia.

In 2002, Gebregeorgis left his job and his home and returned to Ethiopia with 15,000 books donated by the San Francisco Children's Library. With them, he opened the Shola Children's Library on the first floor of his Addis Ababa home.

Young readers quickly overwhelmed the three-room home, requiring the addition of two large tents to provide shade for hundreds at a time. "Watch Gebregeorgis explain how his home became more than just a children's library »

"I just wanted to come back to Ethiopia and help children have a future, have hope,” says Gebregeorgis.

Today, Ethiopia Reads is doing just that. In addition to the original library, the organization established the Awassa Reading Center and Ethiopia’s first Donkey Mobile Library. Inspired by a similar concept he'd seen in Zimbabwe, Gebregeorgis customized a donkey-pulled trailer-cart that now makes weekly visits to rural villages around Awassa.

Reading storybooks to children who have no access to television or computers, Gebregeorgis believes that literacy and education will emancipate his impoverished land, gripped by HIV/AIDS.

Ethiopia Reads recently held its fifth annual Ethiopia Children's Book Week. In 2007, the group offered nearly 94,000 children access to its libraries in Addis Ababa, Awassa and on shady clearings along the Ethiopian countryside.

The African Copyright & Access to Knowledge (ACA2K) Project is probing the relationship in African countries between national copyright environments and access to hard-copy and digital learning materials. The project is probing this relationship within an access to knowledge (A2K) framework – a framework which regards the protection/promotion of user access as one of the central objectives of copyright law.

This project, supported by Canada’s IDRC and South Africa’s Shuttleworth Foundation, and managed by the Wits University LINK Centre in Johannesburg, began in October 2007 with legal researchers in five African countries (Egypt, Ghana, Senegal, South Africa and Uganda) preparing initial “environmental scans” of the copyright contexts in their countries.

Methodology Guide
The ACA2K network has just finalised its Methodology Guide, which is a roadmap for the project’s research and policy engagement between now and early 2010. You can view the Guide at this link

WIPO Welcomes Accession by OAPI (African Intellectual Property Organization) to Key Industrial Designs Treaty

The Goethe-Institut organized a workshop series on the topic of “Libraries as Gateways to Information & Democracy” aiming at discussing the role of libraries for free access to information and democratic development. In 2008, five workshops will take place in Ghana, Kenya, Namibia, Nigeria, and Togo followed by a final conference in South Africa. The focus of the workshops is on strengthening libraries and library associations in fulfilling their crucial role as gateways to information and democracy, by developing strategies for improving networking, advocacy and lobbying.

Up to the beginning of June, two workshops have been held successfully – in Ghana and Nigeria; the others will follow in the next two months. With the contribution of resource persons coming from the respective country, from other African countries and from Germany action plans for the library communities in Ghana and Nigeria have been developed.

For this project, the Goethe-Institut partners with various national library associations and with the IFLA Africa Section.
